

WinkWorld April 2004

Dear Friends,

It appears that our March 2004 WinkWorld may have been hit with cyber critters which caused it not to arrive, or in some cases, to arrive with font problems. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused. We are studying the new realities of e-mailing, which causes new levels of security. We assure you that no e-mail addresses were shared with any outside parties. Please recall that all previous newsletters are archived as is WinkWorld, March 2004, at Archive

This month we plan to share a very short newsletter, until we are sure that we are safer from cyberspace attacks. Thank you for your patience.

Free high school English test prep from Alan Lawrence Sitomer

The author of THE HOOPSTER, Sitomer, is so angry about the money that test-making companies are making from their accompanying test prep materials, that he has generously created and shared his own free test prep materials. Alan is a high school teacher in the inner city, and the students are cracking the test code with their high scores. Thank you, Alan.

I am inspired by the work of Lisa Westbrook and her colleagues at www.OneBranch.org in Texas. I hope you will enjoy their electronic library, which they are creating for families and teachers. Thank you, library friends at OneBranch.
